

HND Construction and the Built Environment

In a nutshell

The HND (Higher National Diploma) in Construction Management builds on the knowledge and skills of the HNC. This covers construction industry fundamentals and planning, health and safety and human resource management in construction, managing construction organisations, and quality in construction.

This course is for you if...

... You have already complete and gained the HNC qualification in construction

... You want a career in construction

What will I be doing?

The HND represents a second year at a level 5 of a full degree. It is an ideal progression from the HNC and provides a progression route onto a degree in Disciplines such as Construction Management, Surveying or Civil Engineering.

COURSE INFORMATION LEAFLET

Modules Studied in the HND are dependent on pathways.

Pathways offered:

Civil Engineering
Building Services Engineering
Construction Management
Architectural Technology
Surveying

Modules Include:

Group Project
Geotechnics
Conservation
Advanced Measuring & Tendering
Advanced Construction Information

What is expected of me?

You'll be required to do the following:

Attend lectures on a day release mode of study.
Inquire at enrolment about government funding through our higher apprenticeships.
Complete Assessments that are based on coursework issued throughout the 2nd year duration of the course.
Study case studies of current projects providing realistic interest and opportunities to engage in professional scenarios.

What comes next?

Following successful completion of the HND, learners can progress to University to top up full degrees.

We have excellent links with local universities and can arrange taster sessions, open days and discussions with tutors at those organisations.

Alternatively, a Level 5 HND will be an ideal qualification to pursue a career in building surveying, site engineering, site management or Architectural Technology.
